

pstree on CentOS

pstree is useful tool, but it is not a default application when you setup CentOS. So you will need to install it by yum.

You will be able to use pstree after running below:

```
sudo yum -y install psmisc
```

Below is an exmple of pstree

```
pstree
systemd--+-NetworkManager---2*[{NetworkManager}]
|
|-agetty
|-auditd---{auditd}
|-automount---5*[{automount}]
|-chronyd
|-crond
|-dbus-daemon
|-httpd---11*[{httpd}]
|-irqbalance
|-java+-java---67*[{java}]
|   `--193*[{java}]
|-java---157*[{java}]
|-lvmetad
|-master--+-anvil
|           |-bounce
|           |-cleanup
|           |-pickup
|           |-qmgr
|           |-smtp
|           `--trivial-rewrite
|-memcached---5*[{memcached}]
|-mysqld_safe---mysqld---120*[{mysqld}]
|-polkitd---6*[{polkitd}]
|-postgres---49*[{postgres}]
|-redis-server---2*[{redis-server}]
|-rsyslogd---2*[{rsyslogd}]
|-sshd---sshd---sshd---bash---su---bash---pstree
|-systemd-journal
|-systemd-logind
|-systemd-udev
|-tuned---4*[{tuned}]
```